As John Brown, Jr. explained in his letter to Gerrit Smith, male abolitionists were typically pacifists who preferred using words over real weapons. His father, John Brown, on the other hand, was a man of action who was not opposed to violence. Dedicated to the abolition of slavery, John Brown helped finance the publication of David Walker's Appeal and Henry Highland's "Call to Rebellion" speech, gave land to fugitive slaves, and raised a black child as his own.
