The Death of Yugoslavia (broadcast as Yugoslavia: Death of a Nation in the US)[1] is a BBC documentary series first broadcast in 1995, and it is also the title of a BBC book by Allan Little and Laura Silber that accompanies the series. It covers the collapse of Yugoslavia, the subsequent wars and the signing of the final peace accords. The Ahmići massacre was the culmination of the Lašva Valley ethnic cleansing committed by the Croatian Community of Herzeg-Bosnia's political and military leadership on Bosniak civilians during the Croat-Bosniak War in April 1993. The collapse of Yugoslavia was spectacular and sudden, but in the context of Balkan history it can hardly be said to have been surprising. From the outset, in the wake of the first world war, the concept of a nation of the southern Slavs, the broad translation of Yugoslavia, was an alien one. It was foisted on the disparate and mutually suspicious peoples of the region by a European diplomatic establishment desperate to create order out of chaos. The first world war itself had been sparked by Balkan jealousies and passions, in particular by the assassination of the Austrian grand duke Franz Fe

Remarkable footage includes previously unseen meetings of the Yugoslav State Council, the Croatian government's secret efforts to smuggle arms into the country, and numerous "home video" and clandestine radio-telephone recordings made with key figures on all sides. In addition to the BBC and Discovery Channel, this remarkable program has also been seen on ORF (Austria), Canal Plus (France), VPRO (Holland), SVT2 (Sweden), RTBF (Belgium), NRK (Norway), Denmark Radio (Denmark) and ABC (Australia). For providing exhaustive and important documentation of an event of international significance, a Pe 'Yugoslavia - Death of a Nation' is the first book to go behind the public face of war and into the closed worlds of the key players in the conflict. After years of research and hundreds of interviews, Laura Silber, Balkans correspondent for the Financial Times, and Allan Little, BBC journalist, present a account of the war drawn from its participants. Challenging the conventional wisdom that the war occurred as a spontaneous and inevitable eruption of ethnic hatreds, the authors expose, from the shelling of Dubrovnik to the peace talks in Dayton, a plan to divide the country by forc Yugoslavia: Death of a Nation.
