Washington, DC: Japan Center for International Exchange. E-mail Citation ». Argues that globalization makes it possible for NGOs to create transnational advocacy networks. The authors illustrate the argument with examples of human rights advocacy, environmental coalitions, and efforts to combat violence against women. Lang, Sabine. NGOs and transnational networks institutionalise conflict as much as cooperation, and reshape states and societies, often inadvertently. NGOs have overthrown dictators, provided life support for collapsed states, and reengineered the family. Their historical origins contrast sharply with current realities, and show signs of radical change in the future.
