

Baby Rhyming Time

by Linda L. Ernst

“This useful resource provides background, logistics and a wealth of practical ideas for programs...This could be an invaluable tool for library staff just getting started, and even experienced presenters will find many new ideas and thoughtful perspectives.”

-- School Library Journal, August 2008

“This is a must for all librarians working with 0-24 month-old children... Whether you are a newcomer to programming for babies or not, Ms Ernst’s new book can contribute much to your work...Baby Rhyming Time is a complete resource for creating excellent programs for babies and young toddlers. Highly recommended.”

The renowned authority on library services for the very youngest patrons has done it again! Linda Ernst has created programming based on the most important findings in babies’ brain development. This new resource is full of activities that stimulate infants’ and toddlers’ cognitive, physical, and emotional growth.

In this versatile book and CD-ROM package, you’ll find book ideas, rhymes, songs and music, props, and more that can be combined to form hundreds of hours of quality programming that will wow parents, educators, and caregivers. The CD-ROM contains lyrics, forms, and posters that can be adapted and easily reproduced. In addition, the book contains suggestions for scheduling, room arrangement, and parent education. Now your programming for babies and infants can strengthen their language acquisition and motor-skill development...and connect your library with families right from the start!
