Illustrating the way in which these sites are positioned along the borders of the kingdom, the paper suggests that this arrangement may have been a strategy employed in Corco LoÁgdeá€™s colonisation of Osraige in the earliest centuries of Christianity. Bookmark. by Anne Connon.Â Dedicated to Professor David V Clarke, former Keeper of Archaeology in National Museums Scotland, on his 70th birthday, the book comprises three sections which reflect some of his many interests. â€œPresenting the pastâ€ offers perspectives on current museum practice, especially in relation to archaeological displays.

The architecture of the Republic of Ireland is one of the most visible features in the Irish countryside " with remains from all eras since the Stone Age abounding. Ireland is famous for its ruined and intact Norman and Anglo-Irish castles, small whitewashed thatched cottages and Georgian urban buildings. What are unaccountably somewhat less famous are the still complete Palladian and rococo country houses which can be favourably compared to anything similar in northern Europe, and the country's many Archaeological excavations in Moneen Cave, the Burren, Co.
