Eyewitness confidence – Case study. Eyewitnesses are very important in the criminal justice system, first during police investigations, and later as sources of evidence when a case is brought to trial. In evaluating the reports of eyewitnesses, the major concern is to determine their accuracy. Outside the laboratory, how confident are memories of persons who witness a real crime. Those studies can be divided into two categories based on their confidence in the memories about details of an armed robbery that was witnessed 3 months prior to testing. This was possible by comparing what was remembered by the victims with actual video-recordings of the crime. In addition, we asked the witnesses to provide confidence.
