An adverse drug reaction (ADR) is an unwanted, undesirable effect of a medication that occurs during usual clinical use. Adverse drug reactions occur almost daily in health care institutions and can adversely affect a patient's quality of life, often causing considerable morbidity and mortality. Much attention has been given to identifying the patient populations most at risk, the drugs most commonly responsible, and the potential causes of ADRs. An increase in the number of drugs on the market, an aging population, and an upward trend in polypharmacy are contributing factors to the prevalence.
