Second Class-Citizen, which tells the story of Adah Ofili from her childhood to her early years in London, begins with a discussion of dreams. The eight-year-old Adah, who was born in Lagos during World War II, can only dream of going to school, since she was not allowed to attend because she was not a boy.Â Rather than being concerned about her welfare or the childâ€™s, he is more interested in using the money she receives from work for his personal advancement. Adah then
